Day – I

Basic Skills and stages of counseling, he explained the importance of verbal and non-verbal communication and also discussed about the initial disclosure stage, Empathy, positive regard, how close and open ended questions should ask during interaction. He conducted some games to clear the concepts.

In the afternoon session he explained about the basic skills of counseling like attending behavior and listening to the client. He emphasized on the linguistic, paralinguistic and non-verbal aspects of the listening skills. He said that to become an effective counselor one should “learn to Listen ; listen to learn”

Exercise – I Role Plays

To role plays were given to students to perform to clear the concepts of skills and stages.

Day – II

Therapeutic intervention

- Client centered therapy – Carl Rogers
- Rational Emotive Behaviour – Albert Elis
- Transactional Analysis – Erik Burn

These three theories were explained with examples.

Role Plays – Three role plays were given to the students

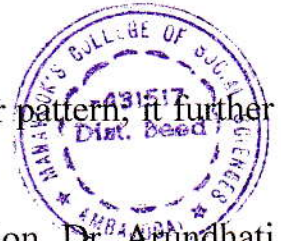

On second day three important therapies are discussed. The resource person made the participants to paraphrase whatever the client has said. With an impetus on reflecting, he told the participants that the purpose of the reflection is to check / refine and convey your understanding of client.

According Dr. D. S. Kore, Counselor should be skilled at the skill of summarizing. Summarizing involves putting together the elements of client messages identifying the common theme or pattern, it further helps in ending the session and reviewing the process.

The workshop concluded with the memento presentation. Dr. Arundhati Patil extended heartiest thanks to the resource person and the students. She also extended her warm thanks to the organizing team (IQAC), faculty members, non-teaching staff who are the supports staff.
